It is not only a link between physical contents but also a link between information, knowledge and human beings. In this magazine, we introduce the services offered by Library and Information Center, as well as the stories behind it, the latest updates, the recipe of using it. As its name, the magazine undertakes the link between YOU and ME, let alone to bring more excellent information services.

IPv6 on Campus

IPv6 is the next generation of the Internet Protocol (IP) address standard that will supplement and eventually replace IPv4.

Currently, Both wired and wireless network in the campus have already enabled IPv4 and IPv6 dual stack, we have enabled IPv6 to access China's next generation Internet project CERNET2 through the Zhejiang University campus network.

KEEP CALM AND ENABLE IPv6

ITS has been working to:

- Enable our Core Network for IPv6 connectivity.
- Manage the existing IPv6 addresses assigned to the university.
- Assist units with setting up IPv6 connections, as not all devices provide the tools to connect seamlessly.

Notes: IPv6 is still experimental at the university.
